The Fulbright-Schuman Program and the College of Europe

The College of Europe and Fulbright Belgium offer American academics and students the opportunity to experience an academic year at the College of Europe in Bruges, Belgium. Founded in 1949, the College of Europe is the world's oldest university institute of postgraduate studies and training in European affairs.

FOR US SCHOLARS

For academics, the Fulbright-Schuman Program funds an academic year for qualified candidates to teach a course in the field of US-EU relations and conduct his/her own research. This Chair is funded every other year; the next eligible period is for the 2019-2020 academic year. Further details can be found on

FOR US STUDENTS

The Fulbright-Schuman Program offers scholarships for study and research American students, who may choose to apply for a Fulbright-Schuman grant to finance their studies in one of the College of Europe's one-year Master's degree programs (European political and governance studies, EU international relations and diplomacy studies, European economic studies, European legal studies and European interdisciplinary studies) at its campus in Bruges, Belgium, or in Natolin (Warsaw), Poland. The College of Europe is a truly multinational institution as graduates from many different countries study and live together. The teaching languages are English and French.

The application deadlines are in October for the grant and in January for admission to the College of Europe (please note that candidates must apply to both institutions separately). Interested candidates should consult
