1. COURSE OBJECTIVES

This compulsory course investigates the rapidly evolving external dimensions of European Union (EU) internal policies with the help of several emblematic case studies chosen from the policy areas of migration, gender, religion and secularism. These policy areas have traditionally received less attention in many curricula on EU external action and are characterised by a common feature of having a direct impact on such groups as migrants, asylum-seekers, women, LGBTQ+ as well as religious and faith-based actors. Drawing from the decentring approach in the study and practice of the EU as an actor of international relations (Fisher-Onar and Nicolaïdis, 2013; Keukeleire and Lecocq, 2016; Wolff et al. 2021), this course will address critically the gap between a Eurocentric mode of externalising EU policies and the need to take into account increasing contestations of the liberal world order, where the mere externalisation of EU policies alone is not sufficient anymore. To remain a relevant order, the 'Brussels effect' and attraction of EU internal policies for third countries needs to be complemented by a self-reflexive external dimension, that is able to respond to the contestation of norms increasingly seen as post-colonial and Eurocentric.

While introducing the students to the latest policy developments in each area, and to traditional policy explanations for such an expansion of EU competences (governance, externalisation, institutionalist, securitization and geopolitical approaches), the course will provide students with elements of critical thinking on the external dimension of EU internal security by mobilising post-colonial, feminist and queer theories. The decentring approach will enable students not only to think critically but also to provide constructive policy solutions to improve the EU's engagement with the rest of the world on these pressing matters. The decentring approach will provide the analytical framework of this course as it aims at reconstituting European agency through three main steps: provincialisation, engagement and reconstruction of diplomatic and policy praxis.

At the end of this course, students will be able to

- master select theoretical and conceptual tools necessary to analyse the external dimensions of EU internal policies;
- examine and compare a range of EU internal policies with external dimensions, with a specific focus on policies that receive less attention in many curricula on EU external action such as gender or cultural policies;
- recognise, appraise and explain the linkages between EU internal and external policies;
- apply the acquired knowledge in order to critically assess and reflect upon contemporary practices in the studied fields of European Union external action and their importance for the EU as a global actor more generally.

2. LEARNING OUTCOMES

The course objectives tie in with the following learning outcomes of the programme EU International Relations and Diplomacy Studies:

- 1.1. The graduate masters the most important theoretical approaches and concepts of International Relations, EU Studies and Diplomacy Studies relevant for the analysis of the role of the European Union in international affairs.
- 1.2 The graduate can describe, explain and illustrate the current state of scientific research in the field of EU external relations in a broad sense and is able to critically assess the results of this research.
- 1.4 The graduate has acquired insights into the political, legal and economic aspects of EU external action and can use these insights to contextualise and interpret new developments.
- 1.5 The graduate is able to incorporate knowledge and understanding of various fields of EU external action and of different related disciplines (such as Political Science, International Relations, Law, Economics) at the interface between EU affairs and world politics.
- 2.2 The graduate has the ability to critically reflect upon problems in international and European affairs, to adopt well-informed points of view and to communicate them effectively orally and in writing, whether working independently or in a team.
- 2.3 The graduate can independently formulate a research question within the field of European affairs, find, select and critically assess relevant sources, answer the question using typical concepts and methods and present the research results in line with the ethical rules of the discipline.
- 2.4 The graduate is capable of processing a large amount of information within a short period of time and to work efficiently and effectively through planning, organising, setting priorities and meeting deadlines.
- 2.5 The graduate has the intellectual maturity and skills to function responsibly and autonomously in a professional context at national, European or international level and the capacity of suggesting possible action that contributes to problem-solving in a creative way.

The course objectives tie in with the following learning outcomes of the programme Transatlantic Affairs:

- 1.1 The graduate masters the most important theoretical approaches and concepts of, depending on his or her disciplinary focus, Economics, International Relations and Diplomacy Studies, Legal Studies and/or Political Science relevant for the analysis of transatlantic affairs.
- 1.2 The graduate can describe, explain and illustrate the current state of scientific research in the field of transatlantic affairs in a broad sense and, in line with his or her disciplinary focus, is able to critically assess the results of this research.
- 1.4 The graduate has insights into historical, political, legal and economic aspects of transatlantic affairs as well as into those policy areas that are of essential importance to transatlantic affairs. He or she can use these insights to contextualize and interpret new developments.

- 1.5 The graduate is able to incorporate knowledge and understanding of various fields of transatlantic affairs and of different related disciplines (such as Economics, International Relations, Legal Studies, Political Science) as well as to adopt both a European and a US perspective on transatlantic affairs.
- 2.2 The graduate has the ability to critically reflect upon problems regarding an extensive range of transatlantic affairs, to adopt well-informed points of view and to communicate them effectively orally and in writing, whether working independently or in a team.
- 2.3 The graduate can independently transform complex transatlantic issues into a research question within the broader field of transatlantic affairs and, depending on his or her disciplinary focus, find, select and critically assess relevant sources, answer the question using appropriate concepts and methods and present the research results in line with the ethical rules of the chosen discipline.
- 2.4 The graduate is capable of processing a large amount of information and appropriately analyse relevant sources depending on his or her disciplinary focus within a short period of time and of suggesting possible actions that contribute to problem-solving in a creative way.
- 2.5 The graduate has the intellectual maturity and skills to take responsibilities and function autonomously in a professional environment at national or international level, and especially in a transatlantic context, and to work efficiently and effectively through planning, organizing, setting priorities, meeting deadlines, cooperating across cultural boundaries and networking.

3. COURSE CONTENTS

- Session 1: Introduction and decentring approach (1.5 h)
- Session 2: The internal-external nexus in migration and asylum (3 h)
- Session 3: The external dimension of EU gender policies (2.5 h)
- Session 4: EU religious engagement: an outside-in perspective (2 h)
- Session 5: Conclusion (1 h)

Please refer to the intranet course page for access to the full course outline.

4. TEACHING METHOD

- Interactive lectures.
- Participation: students are expected to regularly attend the class, to prepare the required readings and to participate actively in the discussions.
- Tutorials: a tutorial will be offered by the course assistant. It will essentially be dedicated to the discussion of the paper assignment.

Please refer to the intranet course page for access to further information and instructions.

5. COURSE MATERIAL

Please refer to the intranet course page for access to the detailed reading list (required and supplementary readings) and the slides.

6. EVALUATION

- Exam paper (100%)

The requirements for the exam paper differ slightly for students in the Master of Arts in Transatlantic Affairs as compared to students in the EU International Relations and Diplomacy Studies programme. Detailed instructions for both student groups can be found in the course outline.
