COURSE OBJECTIVE

The course's objective is the analysis of the classical and modern texts on democracy in order to identify the path of the evolution of democratization process and democratic thought in Europe in last two centuries till the current state.

COURSE LEARNING OUTCOMES

Students are able to identify and to present the main stages of the democratic evolution in Europe in the course of its history.

They are able to describe the main theories of democracy and the most significant examples of the democratic order in European history by explaining the key differences and similarities between them (ancient and modern).

After completing the course students should be able to understand the link between the processes of democratization, institution building and the formation of national identities. They should be also aware of the role of economy, globalization and new forms of social communication for the shaping of the future of democracy in Europe.

Students understand the variety of approaches to the democratic tradition in Europe, the importance of the regional, historical and national context to the different forms of democratic government. They are able to reconstruct the main ideas, values and rules of democracy by autonomously gathering evidence and data and critically interpreting primary and secondary literature.
