

Athanasios Moysiadis (Greece)

Why did you choose POL?

Making a choice among the excellent programs of the College can be quite a task. As far as I am concerned, POL has been my choice because of its unique combination of theory and pragmatism. It offers both the tools to understand the procedures of the European Union and the "bubble" surrounding it, and the theoretical knowledge to answer the simple yet almost existential question of "why the EU acts like this?".

How do you think your experiences in the Department will help you in the future?

This combination is exactly what the department offers to its alumni. The combination of the demanding program with its different courses, seminars and simulation game and the life of the College are nothing but the best preparation for the "real" world of EU affairs.

What advice would you give to prospective students?

Thinking of the following promotions, I could only give two pieces of advice: 1. plan ahead and stick to your planning and 2. be sure to experience the whole package that the College offers, both the academic part and the social one.
