Europe is in a constant state of flux. European politics, economics, law, and indeed European societies are changing rapidly. The European Union itself is in a continuous situation of adaptation. New challenges and new requirements arise continually, both internally and externally.

The College of Europe Studies series seeks to publish research on these issues done at the College of Europe, both at its Bruges and its Warsaw campus. Focused on the European Union and the European integration process as well as the EU's external relations, this research may be specialised in the areas of political science, law, economics, international relations or diplomacy, but much of it is of an interdisciplinary nature.

The objective is to promote understanding of the issues concerned and to make a contribution to ongoing discussions.
