

AIR PASSENGER RIGHTS DEAL REACHED: A simulation exercise at the College of Europe in Bruges saw students assume the roles of transport commissioner, MEPs and journalists to find a way to get the long-delayed air passenger rights file moving under the watchful gaze of experts. First up they resolved a standoff over Gibraltar between the U.K. and Spain, and went on to deliver an acceptable definition of “night time” for flights. Playbook suggests the students offer their services to Zaventem airport.
