

David Vines

David Vines is an Emeritus Fellow of Balliol College, at Oxford University, where he was until recently Professor of Economics. He is also Acting Director of the Political Economy of Financial Markets Programme at St Anthony's College and Director of the Ethics and Economics Programme at the Institute for New Economic Thinking in the Oxford Martin School. In addition he is a Research Fellow of the Centre for Economic Policy Research in London.

David's research is on macroeconomics, finance, and global economic governance; he has published many papers and books on these subjects. His initial work was with the Nobel-Prize winner James Meade in Cambridge; together they published some of the earliest research on inflation-targeting regimes. He is currently working on the restoration of trust in the financial system, on the future of the European Monetary Union, and on the role of the International Monetary Fund in ensuring international macroeconomic cooperation. He teaches macroeconomics, international economics and development economics to both graduate students and undergraduates at Oxford University.

David obtained a BA in Economics and Mathematics from Melbourne University, and an MA and PhD in Economics from Cambridge University. Between 1994 and 2000 he was the Director of the ESRC Research Programme on Global Economic Institutions, and from 2008 to 2012 he was the Research Director of PEGGED, a European Union Framework Seven Research Programme on the European Dimension of the Politics and Economics of Global Governance. In 2003 he was a Houblon-Norman Fellow at the Bank of England, and in 2006 he was a Visiting Fellow at the Reserve Bank of Australia. Earlier, from 1985 to 1992, he was the Adam Smith Professor of Political Economy at the University of Glasgow; and during that time he was a member of the Board of Channel Four Television, and also a Director of Analysys, which was then Europe's pre-eminent telecommunications consultancy firm.

Peter Temin and David have recently published The Leaderless Economy (Princeton University Press, 2013) and Keynes: Useful Economics for the World Economy (MIT Press, 2014). And in 2014 David also published Capital Failure: Restoring Trust in Financial Services (OUP), which he edited with Nick Morris.
